RED DESERT

"Red Desert" (Deserto Rosso) is Michelangelo Antonioni's first venture into the world of color. The motion picture was the recipient of the Golden Lion Award as the best film shown at the 1964 Venice Film Festival. Employing his camera and actors with brilliant artistry, director Antonioni brings a unique and startling use of color to the screen with this film production. Starring Monica Vitti and Richard Harris, "Red Desert" is the story of a young wife who suffers a mental breakdown as a result of an auto accident. Struggling between the worlds of reality and imagination, the woman's efforts to mentally readjust herself are sharply etched against the machine-aged world which threatens her sanity. Produced by Antonio Cervi with music by Giovanni Fusco, "Red Desert" is a Rizzoli Film Distributors release.

Corrado (Harris) is serious and withdrawn at a party to which Giuliana and Ugo have taken him.
