UP IN SMOKE

NO. 21

Huntz Hall (left) finds a skeleton in the closet of his doctor, Fritz Feld, in this scene from Allied Artists' hilarious comedy, "Up In Smoke," starring Hall and the Bowery Boys and now at the theatre. Stanley Clements is featured in the laugh-loaded funfest and the cast also includes Judy Bamber, Byron Foulger, Ralph Sanford and Ric Roman.

The Story

(Not for Publication)

Instead of banking $100, Sach (Huntz Hall) bets on a horse and loses all. Sach swears that he would give his soul to get even with the sharpies who bilked him. Satan (Byron Foulger), visible only to Sach, accepts the proposal and in exchange agrees to give Sach a winning horse each day for seven days. But as usual Sach messes things up. Al (Joe Devlin), head of the bookies, plants Mabel (Judy Bamber) as a waitress in Mike Clancy's (Dick Elliott) cafe to find out Sach's secret and learns that Satan's choice for the final day of the agreement is a horse named Rubber Check. Sach realizes that if Rubber Check wins he is a goner. Duke (Stanley Clements) and Sach, through a ruse, arrange matters so that Sach rides Rubber Check, and tries to lose, but doesn't. The track officials, however, disqualify Rubber Check for being ridden by an unauthorized rider. Sach is free of Satan and although losing all their money the boys are all happy to have Sach back with the gang.

Bowery Boys In New Screen Hit

Latest in the long string of Bowery Boys' comedy successes, Allied Artists' "Up In Smoke," starring Huntz Hall and featuring Stanley Clements, is the current attraction at the theatre.

Judy Bamber, lovely young Hollywood personality, also has a key role in the comedy and the cast includes such favorites as Fritz Feld, Benny Rubin, David Gorcey, Eddie Le Roy, Byron Foulger, Ralph Sanford and Ric Roman.

"Up In Smoke," can best be described as a devil of a picture because it relates the adventures of Hall, maddest of the madcap crew, who runs into a long losing streak at the races and sells his soul to Satan for some winners.

Naturally, there are plenty of laughs and tremendous action as Hall realizes he must break his winning streak or start being a pal to Satan instead of the Bowery Boys.

The picture was produced by Richard Heermance and directed by William Beaudine. Jack Townley wrote the screenplay from an original story by Elwood Ullman and Bert Lawrence.

HUNTZ HALL CELEBRATES 20th ANNIVERSARY AS FILM STAR

Huntz Hall, undoubtedly stands as one of Hollywood's most enduring and prolific stars. The master comedian, now starring in Allied Artists' "Up In Smoke," a Bowery Boys comedy at the theatre, has been a top film personality since 1937 and has appeared in more than 100 motion pictures.

It is doubtful if any other actor in Hollywood can approach such a record.

Hall, who is acknowledged as one of the finest all-round comedians in the business, started his lengthy career when he came to Hollywood in 1937 to star as one of the "Dead End Kids" in Samuel Goldwyn's production of "Dead End."

Since then his career has zoomed along at a steady clip and he has starred in 48 of the Bowery Boys' comedies, including "Up In Smoke," as well as other major studio features. There were two predecessors to the Bowery Boys, "The Little Tough Guys" and "The East Side Kids," and Hall was starred in nearly 40 of these comedies.

And at his present rate, it looks as if Hall, a young veteran of the screen, is good for at least 100 more because he continues to hold his position as one of the favorite personalities of films.

Hall appears with his longtime sidekick, Stanley Clements, and the other Bowery Boys, David Gorcey and Eddie LeRoy, in "Up In Smoke," and the cast also includes Judy Bamber, Dick Elliott, Byron Foulger and Ralph Sanford.

Hall finds himself in a heck of a predicament in this film because he sells his soul to Satan in return for winners at the race track. The picture has been described by critics as one of the best of the Bowery Boys.

BOWERY BOYS LATEST FILM
PROVES SMASH COMEDY HIT

(Advance)
Huntz Hall and The Bowery Boys are up to their wild antics and hilarious comedy again in their latest funfest, Allied Artists' "Up In Smoke," which opens at the theatre.

This can best be classed as the very devil of a picture because all the action starts when Hall sells his soul to Satan. Hall, the leader of the Bowery Boys and undoubtedly the maddest of a mad lot, starts betting the horses and runs into nothing but losers and trouble with the bookmakers.

To get even, he vows he would sell his soul to the devil. Satan overhears his rash remark and offers to provide him with a string of winners in return for the soul. Hall accepts and immediately sets his select circle on its ears as he racks up a formidable string of winners, a feat that excites the attention of the bookmakers' ring.

But the day of reckoning comes and Hall, aided in his machinations by his sidekick, Stanley Clements, realizes that somehow his final horse from Satan must lose or he will be in a heck of a mess. So Hall decides he will ride the animal in the race and from that point it's a case of every man and horse for himself.

In addition to the other Bowery Boys, David Gorcey and Eddie LeRoy, the cast of "Up In Smoke" includes Judy Bamber, Byron Foulger, Fritz Feld, Benny Rubin, Ralph Sanford and many others.

The picture was produced by Richard Heermance and directed by William Beaudine from a screenplay by Jack Townley. Elwood Ullman and Bert Lawrence wrote the original story.

HUNTZ HALL, BOWERY BOYS
SCORE IN COMEDY SUCCESS

(Review)

Huntz Hall and his hilarious buddies, The Bowery Boys, score with another smash comedy hit in their latest film, Allied Artists' "Up In Smoke," an action-loaded laugh-getter that opened yesterday at the theatre.

The Bowery Boys comedies run to a formula that consists of swiftly-paced action geared to countless laughs and their current madness equals anything the slightly zany comics ever have done on the screen.

Hall, who plays Sach, leader of the crew, gets himself into a fine jackpot this time when he loses money betting on the horses and vows he would sell himself to the devil if he could get even with the bookmakers. Satan, played admirably by Byron Foulger, hears Hall's mad promise and makes a bargain with him. He trades seven straight days of winning horses for the soul.

Hall becomes an overnight sensation as he racks up winner after winner, a feat which gets him in considerable trouble with the bookmaker ring. But when it comes to the climax Hall realizes that his last horse must lose if he is to outwit both the bookmakers and Satan.

So he contracts to ride the horse himself and from that point "Up In Smoke" blazes with a thousand laughs.

Judy Bamber In New Fun Film

Judy Bamber, one of the screen's loveliest young actresses, has a key role in Allied Artists' "Up In Smoke," which stars Huntz Hall and the Bowery Boys and now is at the theatre.

Stanley Clements is featured in the hilarious comedy hit, which has a cast that also includes such favorites as David Gorcey, Eddie Le Roy, Fritz Feld, Benny Rubin, Byron Foulger, Ralph Sanford and Ric Roman.

Hall, leader of the madcap Bowery Boys, leads them into more trouble than usual in this film because he runs into a losing streak at the races and barters his soul to Satan for a string of winners.

The picture, 48th in the long and successful run of Bowery Boys hits, was produced by Richard Heermance and directed by William Beaudine.

Hall turns in his usual splendid performance and is aided immeasurably by his closest pal, Stanley Clements, David Gorcey, Eddie LeRoy, Dick Elliott and scores of others. Judy Bamber, a lovely blonde, scores as the girl who tries to trap Hall and other names in the featured cast include Fritz Feld, Benny Rubin, Ralph Sanford and Joe Devlin.
