AGEE

A film by Ross Spears.
90 Minutes, Color.

Blue Ribbon 1980 American Film Festival

“How I loved this film!” Robert Coles
“A sparkling documentary!” Boston Globe

Five years in the making, AGEE chronicles in vivid, dramatic, and often humorous terms the unfolding of a life dedicated to the written word. Perhaps the most versatile American writer this century, James Agee was a novelist, journalist, short story writer, film critic, poet, and screenwriter. His novel Death in the Family won the Pulitzer Prize; his Let Us Now Praise Famous Men is considered an American masterpiece; and his screenplay The African Queen has been loved by millions.

Told by those who knew Agee best, including John Huston, Walker Evans, Robert Fitzgerald, Father James Flye, Dwight Macdonald, and Agee's three wives. And, of course, featuring the words of James Agee.
