DON'T PULL IT!

DIG THAT URANIUM No. 21

As gunman Harry Lauter holds Leo Gorcery petrified, Huntz Hall looks on with interest to see what will happen in "Dig That Uranium," latest in Allied Artists' Bowery Boys series, now at the theatre.

TRIO OF VILLAINS PLOT GRAB OF BOWERY BOYS' RICH MINE

When Leo Gorcery, Huntz Hall and the rest of the gang who operate from the Bowery Sweet Shop strike out for the west to work their newly purchased uranium mine, bought sight unseen and quite unproved, they run into all sorts of trouble with three determined claim jumpers in "Dig That Uranium," latest of the Bowery Boys comedies, now at the theatre.

The three villains, played by Harry Lauter, Myron Healey and Richard Powers, eventually are out-manuevered by Slip and Sach, assisted by an ancient prospector and his long-suffering donkey with Raymond Hatton in the role of the old desert rat.

A hilarious climax of the picture comes when the three claim jumpers, in a jeep, are pursuing the Bowery Boys in their ancient jalopy over mountain trails. By a sharp maneuver, Gorcery, at the wheel, tricks the driver of the jeep to drive over a high cliff, the car plunging in a shower of sparks, rocks and dust into a canyon far below.

Sharing featured roles in the Allied Artists hit are Mary Beth Hughes, David Condon, Bennie Bartlett, Bernard Gorcery and Carl Switzer.

The comedy was produced by Ben Schwalb and was directed by Edward Bernds.

PLAYS WAITRESS

Mary Beth Hughes has the role of a sexy waitress in "Dig That Uranium," latest of the Allied Artists Bowery Boys comedies, now at the theatre. The Ben Schwalb production stars Leo Gorcery and Huntz Hall.

Synopsis

(Not for Publication)

A slick confidence man, Shifty Robertson (Carl Switzer), sells Louis Dumbrowski (Bernard Gorcery) the deed to the Little Daisy uranium mine, purportedly located in Bearclaw Canyon, near Panther Pass. Slip (Leo Gorcery), Sach (Huntz Hall), Butch (Bennie Bartlett) and Chuck (David Condon) pile into an old jalopy with Louie and head for the mine. En route, the car breaks down. The mechanic who repairs it fixes it so that it will travel twice as fast in reverse as in high. In Panther Pass, Ron Haskell (Harry Lauter), Jeannette, a waitress (Mary Beth Hughes), Frank Loomis (Richard Powers) and Joe Hody (Myron Healey) plot to take the mine from the Bowery group when they locate it. With the help of an old desert rat, Slim McKenzie (Raymond Hatton), they locate the site of the mine, but of course find no evidence of uranium. Haskell and his ruffians close in. A fight develops. To escape, Slip and his gang get in their car and whip away, in reverse. Baffled, Haskell and his men try to follow in a jeep. Slip out-smarts them, the jeep dives over a cliff, and in doing so knocks off a jagged ledge of rock right on the site of the Little Daisy. The Geiger counters start a terrific chatter. The Bowery Boys and Louie are rich—until a group of Indians come up to claim the mine. The Little Daisy is on their government reservation.

Trick Up Car For Wild Chase

Mechanics at the Allied Artists studio in Hollywood, accustomed to taking things in stride, were somewhat startled recently when an order came through to build an automobile that could travel faster backward than forward, and be steered from either end.

That they did it, and did it well, can be seen in "Dig That Uranium," latest of the Bowery Boys comedies starring Leo Gorcery and Huntz Hall, now screening at the theatre. The trick jalopy takes a prominent part in the wild mountain chase that comes near the end of the picture.

Prominent in the supporting cast are Mary Beth Hughes, Bernard Gorcery, David Condon, Bennie Bartlett, Myron Healey, Harry Lauter and Raymond Hatton.

The picture was produced by Ben Schwalb and directed by Edward Bernds.

Bowery Boys In Uranium Hunt

(Advance)

Leo Gorcery and Huntz Hall, with the rest of the Bowery Boys, return to the screen at the theatre in "Dig That Uranium," their latest comedy for Allied Artists, in which they meet all manner of adventures on a prospecting trip to the west.

Featured in the supporting cast are Mary Beth Hughes, Bernard Gorcery, David Condon, Bennie Bartlett, Harry Lauter, Myron Healey and Raymond Hatton.

The picture was produced by Ben Schwalb and directed by Edward Bernds.

TRAPPED

DIG THAT URANIUM No. 3

Huntz Hall and Leo Gorcery, co-starred in "Dig That Uranium," latest of the Bowery Boys comedies for Allied Artists, here are trapped. The picture is now at the theatre.

Credits

Produced by Ben Schwalb; Directed by Edward Bernds; Written by Ellwood Ullman and Bert Lawrence; Photographed by Harry Neumann, A.S.C.; Production Manager, Allen K. Wood; Editorial Supervision, Lester A. Sansom; Film Editor, William Austin; Music by Marlin Skiles; Assistant Director, Austen Jewell; Sound Recorder, Ralph Butler; Art Director, David Milton; Set Dresser, Joseph Kish; Continuity by Dick Chaltee; Special Effects by Milton Rice; Makeup by Emile Lavigne.

JEEP PLUNGES OVER CLIFF AS CLIMAX OF WILD CHASE

Climaxing a riotous chase that comes near the end of the picture, a jeep carrying three villainous characters plunges over a high cliff to crack open a rich uranium discovery in "Dig That Uranium," latest in the series of Bowery Boys comedies, now on the screen at the theatre.

Leo Gorcery and Huntz Hall, with the rest of the Bowery group, lead the chase in a decidedly unorthodox manner, for by some mechanical mishap their beaten-up old jalopy is found to travel twice as fast in reverse as it does in forward high gear, and backward is the way they travel.

Action in the picture starts when a shifty character sells Louie Dumbrowsky — Bernard Gorcery, of course—the deed to the Little Daisy uranium mine, located in Bearclaw Canyon, near Panther Pass. Arrived there, they locate the purported site of the mine with the help of an old desert rat, played by Raymond Hatton, but their Geiger counters and scintillators fail to register even the slightest click—until the crash of the jeep some riotous reels later.

Prominent in supporting parts are Mary Beth Hughes, David Condon, Bennie Bartlett, Harry Lauter and Myron Healey. The picture was produced for Allied Artists by Ben Schwalb and was directed by Edward Bernds.

Donkey Eats Picture Props

A donkey with an appetite for plastic interrupted production for several hours on "Dig That Uranium," latest in the Bowery Boys comedy series of Allied Artists, currently at the theatre.

Property men on the picture had made, from the apparently tasty material, a pair of crazy binoculars that Huntz Hall was to use in one of the scenes. When it came time for filming, it was discovered that the donkey, belonging to an old prospector in the picture, had crunched both props to pieces and duplicates had to be brought from the studio before shooting could be resumed.

Leo Gorcery and Hall head the cast, supported by Bernard Gorcery, David Condon, Bennie Bartlett, Harry Lauter and Myron Healey.

The picture was produced by Ben Schwalb and was directed by Edward Bernds from a screenplay by Ellwood Ullman and Bert Lawrence.

Geiger Counter Busts Up Scene

A clicking Geiger counter, held by Leo Gorcery in a scene in which he was playing the role of a uranium prospector, so startled him that he forgot his lines and seconds later the entire company was grouped around him, thinking about riches.

Gorcery's "discovery" was made in the Santa Susanna mountains near Los Angeles during location scenes for "Dig That Uranium," new Bowery Boys comedy now at the theatre. Although the area was slightly radioactive, it did not remotely approach commercial value.

Co-starred with Gorcery in the Allied Artists comedy is Huntz Hall. Prominent in the supporting cast are Mary Beth Hughes, David Condon, Bernard Gorcery, Bennie Bartlett, Myron Healey and Harry Lauter.

The picture was produced by Ben Schwalb and directed by Edward Bernds from a screenplay by Ellwood Ullman and Bert Lawrence.

TICK-TICK

DIG THAT URANIUM No. 5

Leo Gorcery and Mary Beth Hughes hit pay dirt in Allied Artists' new Bowery Boys comedy, "Dig That Uranium," now at the theatre with Huntz Hall co-starred.

Prices Stable In Famed Shop

Unlike any other place of its sort in the world today, prices have never been raised at Louie's Sweet Shop, headquarters for Leo Gorcery, Huntz Hall and the rest of the Bowery Boys since the place was opened 10 years ago. The original signs, pricing various items on the menu, are still in use as each new picture in the series goes into production.

The Sweet Shop again is the base of operations for "Dig That Uranium," latest of the Allied Artists comedies, currently showing at the theatre.

In the supporting cast are David Condon, Bernard Gorcery, Bennie Bartlett, Harry Lauter, Myron Healey, Richard Powers and Mary Beth Hughes.

SECRETS

DIG THAT URANIUM No. 4

Huntz Hall and his burro share a lot of secrets in Allied Artists' "Dig That Uranium," now at the theatre with Leo Gorcery co-starred.

BOWERY BOYS TREK WEST IN QUEST OF URANIUM RICHES

(Review)

The Bowery Boys, backed financially by Louie of the Sweetshop as usual, head westward, on a safari for uranium in their latest Allied Artists' comedy, "Dig That Uranium," which opened yesterday at the ..... theatre.

The action is fast, furious and funny as Leo Gorcery and Huntz Hall, Bernard Gorcery, David Condon and Bennie Bartlett roar into Bearclaw Canyon, Geiger counters in hand. On hand to take their mine away from them, if they ever find it, are a group of rascals headed by Harry Lauter, Richard Powers and Myron Healey, who finally are outwitted after a climactic chase that has the audience roaring.

Gorcery and Hall, together professionally for more than twenty years, have perfected their respective types of humor to the point where they are a screen staple, appearing in four pictures a year as sure as the seasons roll around.

In "Dig That Uranium" they have added comedy support provided by Raymond Hatton who, years ago, appeared with the late Wallace Beery in a series of feature comedies made by Paramount. Hatton appears as an ancient prospector, whose equally ancient mule features in several laugh provoking sequences.

BOWERY BOYS

Leo Gorcery, Huntz Hall and the rest of the Bowery Boys invade the wild west in their latest Allied Artists' comedy, "Dig That Uranium," now playing at the ..... theatre. It is a Ben Schwab production directed by Edward Bernds.

Gorcery, Hall Strike It Rich

Invading the west with Geiger counters and scintillators, Leo Gorcery and Huntz Hall strike it rich in their latest Allied Artists' comedy, "Dig That Uranium," only to have their claim taken away from them in surprising and amusing fashion. This latest in the popular Bowery Boys series is now at the ..... theatre.

Heading the supporting cast are Bernard Gorcery, David Condon, Bennie Bartlett, Harry Lauter, Myron Healey and Raymond Hatton, the latter playing an old desert rat who helps the Bowery group locate the claim they had bought from a wily promoter.

The picture was produced by Ben Schwab and was directed by Edward Bernds.

Our Gang Star In Film Return

Carl "Alfalfa" Switzer, who started his screen career as a child star in Hal Roach's Our Gang comedies, is actively resuming film work and has a featured role in "Dig That Uranium," latest in Allied Artists' series of Bowery Boys comedies, starring Leo Gorcery and Huntz Hall. The picture is currently at the ..... theatre.

In supporting roles are Bernard Gorcery, David Condon, Bennie Bartlett, Harry Lauter and Myron Healey. Ben Schwab produced and Edward Bernds directed.

THOROUGHLY COVERED

DIG THAT URANIUM

No. 22

Huntz Hall even points a gun at himself as Mary Beth Hughes and Leo Gorcery have him covered in one of the mad scenes of "Dig That Uranium," latest in Allied Artists' Bowery Boys series, now at the ..... theatre.

STRIKE!

DIG THAT URANIUM

No. 2

Leo Gorcery's prospecting tool registers a hit in "Dig That Uranium," latest in Allied Artists' Bowery Boys comedies, co-starring Huntz Hall, now at the ..... theatre.

HUNT URANIUM

The Bowery Boys, headed by Leo Gorcery and Huntz Hall, prospect for a uranium claim in "Dig That Uranium," their latest comedy for Allied Artists, now at the ..... theatre. It is a Ben Schwab production directed by Edward Bernds.

OUR GANG

Carl Switzer, once a child star in the Our Gang comedies, has a featured role in "Dig That Uranium," latest of the Bowery Boys comedies, now at the ..... theatre. Leo Gorcery and Huntz Hall are starred in the Ben Schwab production for Allied Artists.

EXHIBIT OF MINERAL ORE

Hobbyists who collect samples of mineral ore should be a good source for plugging "Dig That Uranium." Stores catering to hobbyists also carry such samples. Make a lobby or store window exhibit of a collection of various types of mineral ore. Label each sample and put them under glass to prevent theft. Surround the exhibit with production stills and accessories plus a card bearing theatre name and playdate.

Teen-Age Lingo

The teen-agers of today have a lingo all their own. One of their favorite expressions used in describing things and persons starts with the words "Dig that crazy," etc. Enlist the cooperation of your newspaper editor in digging up as many of these as he can by having them submitted by the youngsters. Offer tickets for the cleverest ones sent in. For example: when first seeing a zebra, the following expression was used, "Dig those crazy pajamas"; and when seeing a dirigible, "Dig that crazy cigar."

MERCHANDISING STILLS

Several of the production stills offer an opportunity for merchandising tieups. These stills are included in the set available at your National Screen Service branch. For western apparel, holster sets, guns, etc., and fancy embroidered western shirts obtain stills 7 and 59; stills 21 and 76 are especially good for Army and Navy and sport stores selling camp equipment.

EXPLOITATION

GEIGER COUNTER STREET BALLY

A couple of boys, dressed a la Leo Gorcery and Huntz Hall, and carrying Geiger counters, should attract a great deal of attention as a street bally. Attach a cloth sign on the bottom of the mechanisms bearing copy such as: WE ARE ON OUR WAY TO DIG THAT URANIUM . . . AND YOU WILL BE ON YOUR WAY TO A LOAD OF LAUGHS WHEN YOU SEE LEO GORCEY, HUNTZ HALL AND THE BOWERY BOYS IN "DIG THAT URANIUM" AT THE REX THEATRE.

CONTEST FOR SCHOOL CHILDREN ON WHAT COUNTRY "DIGS THE MOST"

Get to the school kids by running, via newspaper or geography class, a quiz contest on which the youngsters must supply the answers to the following questions. (Answers are in parentheses). WHAT COUNTRY DIGS THE MOST . . .

Gold? ..... (United States of So. Africa)
 Coal? ..... (United States)
 Silver? ..... (Mexico)
 Iron? ..... (United States)
 Tin? ..... (Malaya)
 Copper? ..... (United States)
 Uranium? ..... (Belgian Congo)

TRICK SIGNS ON VACANT LOTS

A sign with a gimmick to attract attention is illustrated on the right. Have your sign artist paint several of these and spot them on vacant lots around the town. Be sure that the top line is painted in very small letters so that the viewer would have to stand real close to it to be able to read it.

GEIGER COUNTER DISPLAYS

Many department and sporting goods stores sell Geiger counters, especially in mountain areas. You should not have any difficulty in promoting window space as well as a lobby exhibit of the ore finding machines. Check the set of "Dig That Uranium" production stills for a number of stills showing the stars carrying Geiger counters.

Bowery Boys Club Cards

Kids love to belong to clubs. If you have not already organized a Bowery Boys Club, it is not too late to do so. This club, designed to keep every member a regular patron for every Bowery Boys picture, will get the youngsters talking about your latest film in this series. A mat of the membership card is available to you at no cost. Order it from Allied Artists Exploitation Dept., 4376 Sunset Dr., Hollywood 27, Calif.

CARICATURE MATS ARE FREE

The two caricature heads of Leo Gorcery and Huntz Hall, illustrated above, are available in individual 2-column size mats. They can be used for newspaper planting, on heralds, lobby displays (when enlarged), etc. For your free mats write to the Allied Artists Exploitation department.
